

Curriculum Co-creation

What is Curriculum Co-creation?

Students, employers and other relevant stakeholders will be involved as partners in the co-production of the design, delivery and ongoing evaluation of courses.

Why is it important?

- Creates a sense of community amongst students and staff
- Students can collaborate with academics on research and curriculum design and content
- It can stimulate new and creative ideas and ensure courses are authentic and relevant
- Opportunities to work with employers and industry
- Ensure inclusivity and diversity with representatives from groups

How do we achieve it?

Work with Students

- To co-create assessments
- To provide feedback
- To involve students in course development
- To provide insight into diverse student needs

Collaborate with Employers

- To co-design authentic assessments
- To provide real world case studies
- To act as guest speakers
- Offer placements, internships, field trips or collaborative projects

Co-design with Alumni

- To return as guest speakers to share their personal journey
- To open up industry links
- To act as role models/mentors
- To ensure curriculum is relevant and contemporary

Co-create with university staff

- To provide insights from library staff, learning technologists, careers, international office
- To provide insights from support staff such as student unions, spirituality and faith, mental health, societies etc.

For more information:

Co-creating Welfare (2019). Exercises and Welfare [online] available from