Rashi or Rambam? – Leora and Harry Salter

A famous dispute between Rashi and Rambam over the order of the Torah comes to life with this week's Parasha. Rashi, who argues that there is no chronological order to the Torah, sees the Sin of the Golden Calf to come straight after Parashat Mishpatim and argues that actually the details and the making of the Mishkan happens after the Golden Calf. However, the Rambam believes that there is a chronological order to the Torah, argues that first came the giving of the Torah, then the building of the Mishkan and then the sin of the Golden Calf.

Rashi argues that the Jewish people were given the Mishkan as a consequence of the sin of the Golden Calf. The Jewish people were unable to hold onto the revelation at Mount Sinai, so we needed a physical manifestation of G-d's presence on earth. Whereas the Rambam argues that the Mishkan is an extension of the experience at Mount Sinai. The giving of the Torah did not end in Parashat Yitro or even Mishpatim, rather it continued to this week's Parasha.

The building of the Mishkan takes up more than four hundred verses, whereas the creation of the world takes up little more than forty verses. No matter how one sees the Mishkan, we can learn from the detail how important it is and what it can teach us.

It says (Chapter 25, Verse 8): 'And they shall make Me a sanctuary and I will dwell in their midst.' We are given the specifications of the Mishkan, the blueprint of the building, but G-d does not intend to dwell in it. He says, 'I will dwell in their midst,' and not, 'I will dwell in it.' So where do we find holiness, in the Mishkan or in our midst?

Rav Yaakov Chayim Sofer explains that the main part of the Mishkan was not to have a home for the Divine Presence to dwell in, but that they should mend their ways and follow G-d's instructions and their hearts should be open to G-d, and thus, He will dwell in everyone's heart. Even though Hashem commanded the Jewish people to build a Mishkan, the most important thing is that they make themselves holy so that G-d can dwell among them, meaning within each one of them.

However you follow, whether it is Rashi or Rambam, in the reading of the chronology of the Torah, the Mishkan can teach the same lesson. We should not just think that we have a place for G-d and that we have ticked the box, rather we must do everything to follow His commandments to enhance our everyday life, following the ways of Hashem. According to Rashi, we need a physical representation to remind us of Hashem's presence and according to Rambam, we need a physical representation to continue the positive experiences we have.
