Blind Commitment to God, Not to Hate – Rebbetzen Tali Harris

Parshat Ki Tetzei is the Parsha containing the most Mitzvot in the Torah. It covers a vast array of topics ultimately culminating in the Mitzvah of recalling the horrors of Amalek. Rabbi Yosef Soloveitchik notes that the Mitzvah is introduced by the command to remember- זָכוֹר. This is the same language which is used with regards to the Mitzvah of Shabbat. R' Soloveitchik explains that this is the case because this form of remembering is meant to be a constant awareness; we must always be in a state of awareness vis-à-vis Shabbat as well as what Amalek did to us.

What is it that they did to us which we are required to remember? It is of course the attack which they launched on Bnei Yisrael immediately following the exodus from Egypt. It was an unnecessary attack, they were not provoked nor offended; R' Soloveitchik notes that there was no rational reason for this fighting.

This premise is fascinating to compare with an earlier concept which we see encounter in the Parsha: Shatnez. Shatnez is the idea that we do not combine wool and linen in the same garment. The reasoning for this Mitzvah is not given as it is categorized as a Chok, a law whose rationale is unknown to us. By fulfilling this Mitzvah despite its mysterious nature, we are showing our affirmation and unconditional love and commitment to Hashem.

We as Jews chose to keep the Chukim even though we do not understand them. We blindly agree to follow in God's ways because we believe in doing so we are committing ourselves to the greatest cause of all: being Hashem's nation. This blind commitment marks a stark contrast to the blind commitment of Amalek. We chose to blindly follow with the hopes and understanding that this will contribute to us becoming better individuals and the world becoming a more moral and goldy place. Yet, Amalek choses to blindly commit themselves toward Jewish hatred and destruction. R' Soloveitchik attributes all individuals set on the destruction of the Jewish nation as the modern day Amalek. He states that Amalek is a historic phenomenon, one which was evident in figures such as Hitler and Stalin. Sadly, in today's day and age, we know too well that this historic phenomenon is alive and thriving. We must continue to commit ourselves to Hashem and to the values of being a Jew, living with constant awareness of the threat, in the hopes that our behaviour will lead to a better world.
