Shemita: The Catch-All Mitzvah

In Parshat Behar we are first introduced to the Mitzvah of Shemita, the concept of refraining from working the land every 7 years to allow it to rest. It is noted by the commentators that failure to fulfill this Mitzvah will lead to being exiled from the land. This feels a bit extreme; we would imagine this would be the consequence for committing a sin more heretical in nature. Why is it that the specific punishment for not keeping Shemita is exile from the land?

Shemita contains within it 3 powerful Jewish values: wholehearted belief in Hashem, social justice, and honouring the land of Israel.

In refraining from working the land during the 7th year, the farmer is showing full commitment to Hashem and confidence that Hashem will care for him and his family despite abandoning his source of income and sustenance. The year is characterized by total faith that Hashem will be the provider. In committing oneself to this cause, they open up time to work on their relationship with Hashem and are able to throw themselves entirely into learning Torah. While it is not a year for agricultural growth, it is a year for spiritual growth and belief.

Regarding social justice, we see that the Shemita year is the great equalizer of society. All the food which grows during Shemita is hefker, ownerless. This means that anyone can take anything from anyone else's field at any times. This has great ramifications; when I cannot sell my produce because it is officially ownerless, social classes dissolve and the poor regain a sense of dignity. It is a year where slaves have a chance to go free and where we are all one.

Lastly, the Mitzvah of Shemita is only applicable in the Land of Israel. The pasuk states that land will have a shabbat, "שבת שבתון יהיה לך ארץ". The emphasis is on the land having a rest. If the goal of the Mitzvah was purely to encourage belief in Hashem and social justice, then it would be applicable outside of Israel as well. Yet we see that the Mitzvah is inherently connected to the land of Israel. While Shemita does provide a chance for the land to lay fallow and for nutrients to replenish, it also highlights the importance of their being Jews in Israel to work the land and reap the benefits of the fruits of Israel.

It is to this vain that we can understand why the ramifications for not keep Shemita are so severe; it is a Mitzvah which contains within it so much of what the essence of Judaism is all about.

The Kinloss Children's Choir (Years 3-6) and raffle is BACK!

To mark the time period between Yom Haatzmaut and Yom Yerushalayim, the Years 3-6 Children's Services will be learning to sing the chorus of the Mi Shebeirach for the Israeli soldiers, with the aim of performing the song in the Main Shul and Minyan at the end of the services on Shabbat 1st June (the Shabbat before Yom Yerushalayim).

It would be lovely to have as many children as possible join the children's services on Shabbat 11th, 18th and 25th May, when they'll be learning the song, so they're ready to join the choir on 1st June.

Each week your child attends the service from May 11 - June 1, they'll be entered in to a raffle prize draw. So if they come for all four weeks, that's four raffle entries! A form will be sent out after each Shabbat on the KYC WhatsApp group which can be used to enter the raffle.

If they can't attend for all three weeks, they can practice at home too ...
