Parshat Shekalim: What's it all about? – Rabbi Josh Harris

Each year, on the Shabbat of Rosh Chodesh Adar or the Shabbat immediately preceding it, we read Parshat Shekalim – the opening passage of Parshat Ki Tisa which describes the giving of the half shekel coin as part of the census Moshe was commanded to take of the Jewish people. In the times of the Beit Hamikdash, this donation was given yearly, and the money was used to purchase communal sacrifices in the Beit Hamikdash. The donation was required to be given before the month of Nissan, and beginning from Rosh Chodesh Adar announcements would be made to remind people to fulfil this mitzvah.

After the destruction of the Beit Hamikdash, there was no longer a biblical obligation to give the half shekel donation. Nonetheless, we still commemorate the mitzvah in two ways. First, we have the custom to donate three half coins at Mincha before Purim (or, when Purim falls on a Motzei Shabbat as it does this year, the coins are given at Mincha on Taanit Esther). We done three coins because the word 'Teruma', meaning 'donation', is repeated three times in Parshat Shekalim.

The second way we commemorate the mitzvah is by reading Parshat Shekalim each year. The Mishna Berura (685:2) explains that this custom is not simply a memorial. The verse in Hoshea (14:3) says, "Our lips will replace the bulls". Nowadays, when we cannot fulfil our obligation to bring sacrifices and perform the Temple service, a person is supposed to study the Torah portion and laws of that sacrifice, and it is considered on some level as if the korban was sacrificed. It is for the same reason that we recite the Torah portions that describe the daily offerings each morning, recite the verses relating to the Korban Mussaf that was brought on Shabbat and Yom Tov during our own Mussaf services, and describe the service of the Kohen Gadol on Yom Kippur during the Yom Kippur Mussaf. We daven that we will soon merit to fulfil these mitzvot in their fullest extent.

The message of Parshat Shekalim is also closely related to Purim. The inner essence of the mitzvah of the half shekel is that we recognise that on our own, we cannot be whole. At the same time, we are a nation made up of individuals and only through expressing our individuality and the individual role we must play, can we truly be our strongest as a nation. We express the importance of the individual contribution by requiring each person to give the half shekel. We express our recognition that we are not complete when not joined as part of the nation b only giving half of a shekel.

In the Purim story, Haman describes the Jewish people as "scattered and dispersed among the other peoples." We had failed in the realm of Achdut and the understanding that it is vital we remain strong as one nation. Exile begins when we are disconnected from each other.

Furthermore, the Purim story begins to take a turn when Mordechai points out to Esther, "And who knows, perhaps you have attained to royal position for just such a crisis." (4:14) Esther doubted her individual role in Hashem's plan and it required Mordechai to remind her of her responsibilities.

Rosh Chodesh Adar is therefore the perfect opportunity to read Parshat Shekalim and remind ourselves of the duality of the Jewish people – our strength as a nation and the importance of our individual contribution.
