Understanding our Nation – Leora and Harry Salter

'But not only with you am I making this covenant… but with those standing here with us today before the Lord, our G-d, and with those who are not here with us, this day.' Devarim, 29:13-14

Sivan Rahav-Meir, a leading Israeli broadcaster, recounts a story between David Ben-Gurion and Yitzhak Tabenkin, a founder of the Kibbutz Movement, in her book '#Parasha'. Ben-Gurion asked advice from Tabenkin regarding the partitioning of the Land of Israel. Tabenkin agreed to offer his advice but wanted a day to take counsel from two individuals. A day later, Tabenkin urged David Ben-Gurion to refuse the offer put forward, to which Ben-Gurion followed his advice. Ben-Gurion then asked Tabenkin who the two people he consulted were, to which Tabenkin answered: 'from two people, from my grandfather who died ten years ago, and from my grandson who is not yet born.' In this answer Tabenkin shows his responsibility for the past and the future, for not just the people who are present but for the people who are not physically present.

Parashat Nitzavim tells not only of a covenant between the present and G-d, but of all generations, past and future. The beginning of Parashat Nitzavim says how all of the children of Israel, including 'your heads of tribes, your elders, your officers, every man of Israel, your young ones, your wives, the stranger in your gate, from the wood-heaver to your wood-drawer' are part of the covenant. No one can shy away from the covenant to make us into a real and proper nation.

The Gemara in Taanit, 23a, tells a story of Choni HaMe'aggel who was troubled by the meaning of the verse: 'שִׁיר הַמַּעֲלוֹת בְּשׁוּב יְהוָה אֶת־שִׁיבַת צִיּוֹן הָיִינוּ כְּחֹלְמִים׃' 'A song of elevation: When the Lord brought back those who returned to Zion, we were like those who dream.' Rashi comments that this verse of the Psalm compares the Babylonian exile to a dream lasting seventy years. Choni then saw a certain man planting a tree that took seventy years to bear fruit, asking him what the point of planting the tree is if you won't see the fruit it bears? To help him realise the answer, Hashem sent Choni to sleep for seventy years, waking him up afterwards to see the grandchildren of the tree planter benefit from the tree.

This story not only highlights the promise and covenant of G-d and the Jewish people of the land of Israel but also highlights the need and necessity for us to prepare for our future generations. We may not be able to see the instant success of our work, but one day in the future our hard work will pay off. We must continue to invest in future Jewish generations, to make them aware that they are part of the story and they are part of an everlasting covenant between the people of Israel and G-d.

Realising the strength and importance of our youth and our future generations is a key part of realising what it really means to be a people and a nation. Only when we consider every generations do we understand what it means to be a nation.
