SEE PAGE 3 FOR PESACH SERVICE TIMES

At the Pesach Seder we ask the four questions, מה נשתנה, which serve as a springboard for the story of our exodus to be retold in detail. We eat matzah to remind us of the food our ancestors ate when they left Egypt, we eat bitter herbs to recall the bitterness of our slavery, we lean since in every generation we are commanded to envision and re-experience the Exodus. The one question that is not answered in the Hagadah is why we dip twice on this night, a vegetable into salt water and bitter herbs into 'charoses'.

The name Pesach means to 'skip over'. G'd skipped over the Jewish houses during the plague of the firstborns, as these houses displayed the blood of a sheep or goat of the Korban Pesach. Is this the most significant part of the festival? Moreover, did G'd really need a sign to know where the Jewish homes were? It seems strange that we were even commanded to display this blood. Blood is a sign of vitality and respected in Jewish law, for example, when a bird is slaughtered there is a mitzvah to cover its blood and we are not allowed to consume blood.

If we go back to 232 years before the Exodus, when Yakov and his children settled in Chevron, the Torah tells us Yosef's brothers 'hated him' (Beraishit 37:4). They threw him into a pit, stripped him off his coat and sold him as a slave to merchants travelling to Egypt. There Yosef was cast into prison for 12 years until he became the viceroy of Egypt. Twenty-two years later Yosef is reunited with his family; his family going down to Egypt resulted in the Egyptian exile, which lasted 210 years. The brothers misled their father, Yakov, by dipping Yosef's tunic into the blood of a goat, saying that Yosef was eaten by a wild beast. Yakov spent years mourning and was inconsolable. Seeing this, had the brothers not dipped the tunic into blood, they would have eventually told Yakov that Yosef was not dead and Yakov could have 'bought' Yosef back from slavery.

Now, on the cusp of redemption, Moshe asks the Jewish people, you will leave Egypt tomorrow but will Egypt leave you? We can be free physically but are we free emotionally. Moshe takes the Jewish people back to the moment where Yosef's brothers dipped his tunic into blood. He tells them to dip a bunch of hyssop into the blood of the Korban Pesach and paint this on their doorposts, to symbolise that this is where a Jewish family lives in unity. They are not allowed to leave their houses until morning. Moshe tells them, even if you have an argument, do not separate from your family, do not stop talking and listening to each other. They use a bunch of hyssop, 'Agudas Eizov'. 'Agudah' means a group, the Pesach offering had to be eaten as group, a unified unit. Hyssop, was used as a cleanser, Moshe tells the people we need to cleanse ourselves of historical infighting and fragmentation. If we cannot be with each other when there are disagreements we cannot be redeemed.

We dip a vegetable into salt water at the start of the Seder, symbolising the dip of Yosef's coat which caused the Egyptian exile and the tears shed by Yakov and the Jewish people. Towards the end of the Seder we take a bitter vegetable and dip it into sweet charoses, symbolising the catalyst for redemption, transforming bitterness into sweetness, allowing ourselves to be set free.

This fundamental message that Moshe gave us 3336 years ago is vital for us to internalise in these difficult times. It is time for us to take the second dip, transforming bitterness into love and redemption, being open to letting go of in-fighting, bickering and jealousy, creating space for others in our lives even where there are differences. It pains G'd to see His children fighting, unity is our most potent spiritual weapon, יחד ננצח - through 'unity we will win'. Let us unite and bring peace in Israel and to the entire world speedily in our days.

Shabbat Shalom, Good Shabbos and Chag Sameach! Chazan Eli and Nechama Sufrin

PESACH MESSAGE 5784

Among the most dramatic moments in all of Jewish history is the point at which the Children of Israel found themselves caught between their Egyptian pursuers and the deep blue sea.

After hundreds of years of bitter slavery, freedom finally seemed within reach. But, as our ancestors stood on the shoreline, with the Egyptian army bearing down upon them, their fate hung agonisingly in the balance. What followed was an astonishing exchange between Moses and the Almighty.

Moses characteristically prostrated himself upon the earth and cried out to Hashem for help. He could never have imagined what the response would be:

"Why are you crying to me. Speak to the Children of Israel and let them travel!"

The message of this astonishing admonition is clear: There is a time for prayer and a time for action, and we must never rely upon one to the exclusion of the other. Rashi teaches that it was precisely this lesson which Moses had in mind when he restricted his prayer for the well-being of his sister, Miriam, to the shortest Biblical prayer on record: "God please, heal her please". He knew that at that moment, his words needed to be accompanied by action.

This was one of the central lessons of the Covid-19 pandemic, when we recognised that our Bitachon – trust that Hashem will be there for us in our hour of need, must be accompanied by Hishtadlut - our own efforts towards achieving our goals.

Our sages capture this principle in the Rabbinic aphorism: 'You should never rely on a miracle'.

Since the 7th October, we have been united in prayer. Additional Psalms and special supplications continue to be recited in Shuls around the world. We hold every single innocent victim of this awful conflict in our hearts and pray with every fibre of our being for peace, security and the return of all hostages.

Yet, we must also hear the echo of Hashem's words to Moses: "Why are you crying to me?"

This is also a time for action.

Whenever it has seemed that our community's capacity to stand against the torrent of hatred directed against Jews and the State of Israel might reach breaking point, I have been reminded by so many of you that in fact, our collective resolve knows no bounds.

From vigils to solidarity visits, media campaigns and local activism – British Jews have made clear that we will not rest while our people are under attack, whether at home or in Israel.

Sadly, our work is not yet done. And as we celebrate the festival of our freedom, we are reminded that throughout our history, with the help of Hashem, we have prevailed.

May we continue to be Hashem's partners in bringing peace and security to all of His people.

Valerie and I wish you Chag Kasher Vesameach,

Chief Rabbi Sir Ephraim Mirvis KBE

Message from the President of the United Synagogue

Each Pesach around the Seder table, we sing Vehi She'amda, a song about God saving the Jewish people from the enemies who try to destroy us in each generation.

This year, the song feels particularly poignant. This is the first Pesach since the worst massacre the Jewish people have experienced since the Holocaust and I suspect as we sing these words this year, our thoughts will turn to the pain and suffering which our brothers and sisters in Israel have experienced since October 7, the hostages who remain in Hamas captivity as I write this message, as well as the difficulties we have faced here with the alarming rise in antisemitism.

The first line, "Vehi she'amda la'avoteinu velanu", translates to "It is this which has stood by our ancestors and us." It is a line which connects our current suffering to the suffering of generations before us, but also to the survival of the Jewish people. This message of hope will feel especially pertinent this year – that the Jewish people will survive this too.

The Chief Rabbi explains that the word this refers to God, our traditions and our texts which have sustained us for more than 3,000 years. During Seder nights we move from telling the story of Jewish suffering to focus on the Exodus from Egypt and our redemption from slavery. Seder night is the most observed of all Jewish traditions. We therefore feel not only a deep connection with our ancestors, but with Jews all over the world who are recounting the same story.

Through all of the darkness, it can be difficult to remember the light that has also shone through in these past few months. We have seen amazing unity amongst the Jewish community, both in Israel and here.

We have felt this unity deeply at the United Synagogue, with our communities running solidarity events, vigils, hearing testimonies from survivors and family members of those killed or captured, as well as many inspirational and moving talks. Many of our Rabbis, Rebbetzins and leaders have also been to Israel on solidarity missions in the past few months, where they have seen the aftermath of the worst form of evil, as well as the incredible way that the country has come together to support one another.

My message to you this Pesach is to look for the light amongst the darkness. The good amongst the evil. It is that hope and unity which has kept us going and has kept the Jewish people surviving.

We continue to pray for the release of the hostages and peace in Israel.

Wishing you and your families a chag kasher v'sameach. Have a wonderful Pesach.
