Bikkurim & The Power of Narrative Psychology

‘You shall then recite before the Lord your God: My father was a fugitive Aramean. He went down to Egypt with few numbers and sojourned there; but there he became a great and very populous nation.’ (Devarim 26:5)

For millennia, human beings have grappled with a key existential question. What grants us our core identity in life? What are the defining characteristics that make us who we are? If we had to summarise ourselves in one sentence, what words would we choose to use?

Dan McAdams, a professor of psychology at Northwestern University in the United States, has carried out extensive research in the field of narrative psychology. The central premise of this area of study is that humans naturally communicate in a narrative way. In other words, they tell stories – particularly about themselves. But as researchers like McAdams argue, telling a life story isn’t simply a recounting of events that have occurred during a person's lifetime. Instead, it is an important source of identity. The facts that are woven into a life story explain why particular events were important to a person, what they mean for who they are today and how they inform what they hope to become in the future. As put by McAdams, ‘Life stories do not simply reflect personality. They are personality, or more accurately, they are important parts of personality, along with other parts, like dispositional traits, goals, and values.’

Parshat Ki Tavo opens with the mitzvah of Bikkurim, the requirement for a farmer to bring the first of his annual produce to the Temple. The enigmatic part of this mitzva is the declaration he is required to make. Covering the full sweep of Jewish history, the farmer is expected to recount the very words we set out in the core of the Haggadah text as a powerful, personal life story, from the descent of Yaakov and his sons to Egypt up to the present day.

In light of the importance of narrative psychology we can achieve a better understanding of the key purpose behind the farmer’s declaration. Through retelling this story in the first person, the farmer establishes a powerful sense of identity as only the retelling of a personal life story can accomplish. In doing so, as we demonstrate ourselves every year on Seder night, the farmer is able to claim our national narrative as his or her very own.

Tuesday 17th September 2024

Dear Friends,

We are honoured and delighted to finally commence our new roles as Senior Rabbi & Rebbetzen of Kinloss!

We are immensely grateful for all the support and encouragement we have received over the past six months from so many people. In particular, we would like to express our appreciation to Rabbi Josh and Rebbetzen Tali, Rabbi Heller, Rabbi Fine, the office team led by Ian, together with the Executive and Council for all their efforts behind the scenes in ensuring a smooth transition.

Over the coming days, weeks and months - and in particular over the upcoming Yamim Tovim - we look forward to meeting and getting to know as many of you as possible and supporting you all in whatever way we can.

It is an immense privilege to partner with you all in helping to write the next chapter of the remarkable Kinloss story. We invite you to join with us in building a community in which every single member is valued and can find a place they can call home.

Above all, as we begin this journey together, we pray that Hashem grants us all the gifts of good health and happiness in the coming year and that we experience only peace, blessing and security for all the Jewish people, both in this country and especially in Israel.

For now, we are pleased to share with you our personal contact details - please save them for future reference and if there is anything we can do, please just reach out.

The United Synagogue cemeteries are maintained to a good standard but due to the nature of the grounds there are inevitable risks namely, slips and trips. By agreeing to visit our cemeteries, the United Synagogue Burial Society consider that you understand and accept these conditions.

Please be careful when visiting as paths can be very uneven. When walking around the graves please ensure that you do not hold onto the headstones and ensure you watch your footing. The ground at these cemeteries is very volatile; subsidence can occur at any time. Please take notice of the iron railings and any signage indicating risk.
