Learning from Experience - Rabbi Josh Harris

In the usual Haftorah for Parshat Mishpatim, Yirmiyahu, the prophet, admonishes the Jewish people for not treating their slaves properly. He rebukes them for not keeping to the Torah's commandment of sending out a Jewish slave at the end of the 7th year of enslavement. Yirmiyahu opens his rebuke by saying:

"Thus said the LORD, the God of Israel: I made a covenant with your fathers on the day I brought them out of the land of Egypt, the house of bondage, saying... "In the seventh year each of you must let go any fellow Hebrew who may be sold to you; when they have served you six years, you must set them free." But your ancestors would not obey Me or give ear." (Yirmi'a 34:13 - 14)

The phrase 'On the day I brought them out of Egypt' seems quite surprising. This week's Parsha, where the commandments regarding the Hebrew slave are first detailed, did not take place on the day that the Jewish people left Egypt! This week's Parsha follows Matan Torah. It is at least 50 days after the Exodus. How can Yirmiyahu say that Hashem commanded us the laws of slavery on the day we left Egypt?

Some of the commentators explain that the phrase doesn't mean on the literal day of the Exodus from Egypt, but rather it means in that period of time. However, a clear question remains. All the 613 mitzvot were commanded in this period of time! What is unique about the laws of slavery that it is associated specifically with the day we left Egypt?

Many commentators ask why the laws of slavery were the first set of laws we received following the 10 commandments. One answer is that the Torah is teaching us that if you go through a bad experience and you see how terrible something is, you must be extra careful in your own life to be alert in that area. Once you felt the mistreatment of others, you have to be supersensitive not to be the one who mistreats other people. If you suffered from a warped character trait, you have to be careful not to make mistakes with that very same character trait yourself. When the Jewish nation left Egypt, Hashem immediately warns them not to veer in their own treatment of slaves due to the suffering they had experienced being slaves themselves.

That is what Yirmiyahu means. The Torah commanded us how to treat slaves in a way that doesn't mirror our own mistreatment. This set of rules stems back to the day we left Egypt and comes to counter any desire we might have had to take revenge on our own oppression.

Nearly 40 students attended last week's Kinloss Lunch & Learn at JFS for Years 9, 10 & 11. Following a pizza & sushi lunch we had a fascinating discussion about whether the Torah permits a person to risk their own life in order to save the life of somebody else.

Stories from Israel

Rav David Milston

Where to start? It was a Simchat Torah we will never forget. With tears in my eyes I saw my two eldest sons put on their uniforms and join their units. It was hard to continue with the seudat Chag, when it came to Havdala, I could hardly say the words.

There have been months of heartache, desperate worry, and unforgettable moments. Each time a son or son in law returned from the front - precious moments of relief. These are trying times, I have been here for 34 years, seen a few wars, much terrorism and lived through intifadas. Somehow this has been different. I have seen Am Yisrael like never before, and like everyone else - I have seen antisemitism on a world wide basis like never before. We are still fighting and will continue to fight as Avraham Haivri so many years ago, he stood alone, we stand alone. But we stand with truth and goodness as our flag, and most importantly we stand together. I have never been prouder of my people, I have never been prouder of my country, I have never been prouder of my children, and I have never been so certain about my beliefs.

I would never want you to be anywhere else only here in my homeland Israel.

Much love.
