A Selichot Perspective – Rising to the Challenge

This Motzei Shabbat marks the start of the recital of Selichot, or ‘penitential prayers’. These special prayers are added to the daily service during the week immediately prior to Rosh Hashanah, as well as on the days between Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

The primary theme of these prayers, as the name suggests, is asking Hashem for forgiveness prior to and between the actual Yamim Noraim, the Days of Awe. The challenge is that much of the language of the selichot is written in a concise and highly poetic form of Hebrew, presenting difficulties in terms of basic understanding even for the fluent Hebrew speaker. In addition, the prayers are usually recited before Shacharit, making concentration at any level a challenge at this (often) unearthly hour of the morning!

Here is one simple idea which helps cast the Selichot prayers in a different light. In a moving work entitled ‘The Sunflower’ (1969), the late Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal explored the possibilities and limits of human forgiveness based upon his experiences in the Holocaust. In doing so, he consulted both theologians and academics worldwide, questioning and probing their perspectives on forgiveness.

Although the responses vary, one theme stands out in the book. Forgiveness is no simple matter. It requires a sincere demonstration on the part of the individual seeking it to chart a new course, demonstrating that they have become greater and better than they had previously believed was possible. Furthermore, in many human situations, the road to forgiveness begins with outward signs of consideration for the aggrieved party. This involves above all a willingness to acknowledge fault and the humility to accept that perfection in life has not yet been achieved.

With this in mind we can better understand the fundamental purpose of the Selichot prayers. They are designed to create a framework that helps us realise that achieving forgiveness through coming closer to Hashem is a process that requires dedication, commitment and above all a desire to achieve it. Yes, it is true that the framework itself may sometimes feel somewhat artificial. We may not understand much of the deeper meaning behind the prayers. Yet, in the sphere of mending human relationships, it is often those initial difficult outward steps which are critical in achieving the desired goal. So too, the Selichot prayers are designed to gently help us begin the journey towards the greatness that the approaching Days of Awe are capable of bringing out in us. Through them, we can rise to the challenge of self-growth in life – an aim eminently worthy of an early start each day.

Please note that West Ham and Plashet Cemeteries may be unsupervised during visits.

The United Synagogue cemeteries are maintained to a good standard but due to the nature of the grounds there are inevitable risks namely, slips and trips. By agreeing to visit our cemeteries, the United Synagogue Burial Society consider that you understand and accept these conditions.

Please be careful when visiting as paths can be very uneven. When walking around the graves please ensure that you do not hold onto the headstones and ensure you watch your footing. The ground at these cemeteries is very volatile; subsidence can occur at any time. Please take notice of the iron railings and any signage indicating risk.
