How close should you sit near a bonfire? – Leora and Harry Salter

The Mishnah in Avot (2:10) speaks about how we should sit close enough to learn from wise people, but not too close to be overfriendly and not too far aware to not learn from them. It uses the metaphor of a bonfire, where to properly benefit from the warmth, one needs to sit close enough to feel the heat whilst ensuring they aren't too close that they will get burnt but not too far away that they will not feel the heat.

Parashat Bamidbar consists of many events including a censuses in which most of the Bnei Yisrael are counted. We also learn important details regarding the infrastructure of the camp of Bnei Yisrael and how the people, as well as the specific groups within the Bnei Yisrael, function together.

The people were divided into four groups, each consisting of 3 tribes that surrounded the Mishkan. Whilst 9 tribes made up the outer perimeter of the Mishkan, Moshe, Aharon and the 3 Levite families – Gershon, Kehat and Merari, formed a layer around the Mishkan. Rashi comments that the positioning of each tribe is significant, for example, the tribes that were nearest to Moshe and Aharon were more likely to be scholarly. Rashi notes that the tribes of Yehuda, Yisachar and Zevulun all became scholars because of their location adjacent to Moshe and Aharon.

This also works in the negative sense too. In a few weeks' time we will read the story of Korach who was from the Levite family of Kehat, who camped adjacent to the tribe of Reuven. Rav Milston, Rosh Midrasha at Midreshet Harova, comments that even though Judaism believes in free choice and individualism in the sense that we all have the availability to choose our actions, we can still be influenced by those we choose to associate ourselves with.

One of the most important decisions that a person can make is the people they want to be associated with and the community they build. We have the right to choose who we want to be friends with and how we build our relationships.

As the Passuk in Proverbs says (12:26): A righteous person gives his friend direction, but the way of the wicked leads astray. Rashi comments that a righteous person is more generous than his neighbour, whilst a wicked person who is accustomed to harming will lead people astray.

In Sefer Bamidbar we see the importance our associations with fellows. As the Mishnah in Avot says (1:6) Rabbi Yehoshua Ben Parchiah teaches that one must acquire for thyself a friend. We have a responsibility to ensure that we are caring for each other and increasing our interpersonal skills and service to Hashem to influence people in the best way possible.

The executive, council and youth working group are delighted to announce the appointment of Rabbi Josh and Tali Harris (Community Rabbinic Couple).

They will be joining us from Israel in August focused on working with children and youth, their families, and other young members of the shul.

They have an exciting programme of events coming up which they can't wait to share!

They will be joining our Rabbinic Team in August and will be working with children and youth, their families, and other young members of the shul.

Rabbi Josh Harris is originally from Ilford and attended Hasmonean High School. Upon finishing high school, Rabbi Josh set off to Israel where he learnt in Yeshivat Kerem B'Yavne (KBY) for 3 years.

Rabbi Josh holds a degree in Business Administration from The Jerusalem College of Technology, Machon Lev, and he is currently completing his Rabbinic studies with Mizrachi's Semicha programme in Jerusalem.

Growing up, Rabbi Josh was very involved with youth groups, participating in Bnei Akiva, Sinai and Ezra. He has held senior leadership positions with youth groups in both the UK and Israel. Additionally, Rabbi Josh spent two years teaching at Yeshivat Hakotel.

Tali Harris grew up in New York and made Aliyah with her family right before seminary. She attended MMY Seminary and then went on to do a year of National Service in Israel (Sherut Leumi).

She holds a degree from Bar Ilan University in Education and spent an additional 3 years learning in various advanced women's Torah learning programmes including Matan's Eshkolot Programme for Tanach Educators, Mizrachi's Lapidot Programme for Torah SheBaal Peh Teachers, and most recently in Yeshiva University Israel's advanced Beit Midrash Programme.

She has taught in various seminaries in both formal and informal capacities.

Rabbi Josh and Tali are members of the Mizrachi UK Rabbinic Fellowship Programme and are participants in Mizrachi's Shalhevet Leadership Training Programme. They currently live in Baka, Jerusalem with their two sons, Matan and Avishai.
