This week's Torah reading, Emor, outlines the punishments for either intentionally or accidentally injuring another person. The verse reads, 'An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a hand for a hand, a foot for a foot' (Emor 20:24). However we know that this punishment has never been carried out in any Jewish court of law. The Rambam explains in הלכות חובל ומזיק this verse is not to be interpreted literally, rather it means one has to pay compensation to the injured person. The Talmud (Baba Kama, ch.8) dedicates two full pages containing ten different proofs as to why this verse actually refers to monetary compensation. Why doesn't the Torah just simply say what it means?

There is no way of understanding the Written Torah without the Oral Torah. The Written Torah comprises the twenty-four books of the 'TaNaCh', Torah (the Five Books of Moses), Nevi'im (Prophets), and Ketuvim ('Writings'). The Oral Torah contains laws given to Moshe at Har Sinai, G-d's instructions to Moshe on how one is to study and understand the Torah ('The Thirteen Principles of Torah Exegesis') and 'gezayrot/edicts' which the Torah authorised the Rabbis to introduce in order to protect the word of the Torah. The Oral Torah was transmitted from teacher to disciple until approximately 1800 years ago when Rabbi Judah the Prince assembled the scholars of his generation and compiled the Mishnah, a collection of all the oral teachings that preceded him.

Without the Oral Torah we wouldn't know how to do most of the mitzvot, we wouldn't know how to keep Shabbat, put on Tefillin, what an Etrog is etc. So why do we need the Written Torah at all? The Written Torah is a text that is unchangeable and contains within it the Oral Tradition. When the Written Torah describes a concept, it gives us not just the Halacha but also the meaning of that concept from the spiritual to the concrete level. The Rambam explains that when the Torah says 'a blemish for a blemish', it does not mean the person should be maimed rather that they deserve to be maimed. The Torah writes in this way to impress upon us the severity of the crime, so one shouldn't think that if they cause an injury to someone you can just pay them and all will be forgiven. The physical damage caused may never be able to be repaired and cannot be compensated for with money. In fact the Rambam writes explicitly:-

"Causing bodily injury is not like causing monetary loss. One who causes monetary loss is exonerated as soon as he repays the damages. But if one injured his neighbour, even though he paid all five categories of monetary restitution — even if he offered to G-d all the rams of Nevayot [see Isaiah 60:7] — he is not exonerated until he has asked the injured party for forgiveness, and he agrees to forgive him." (Rambam, הלכות חובל ומזיק, 5:9)

This is not a monetary issue, the Torah writes this way to impress upon us that there is deserved punishment and actual punishment. On a theoretical level the 'deserved' punishment is an eye for an eye, but that is not the practical halacha.

The Vilna Gaon points out that The Torah does not actually write, 'an eye for an eye,' as this would have been 'ayin be'ad ayin' however the Torah says 'ayin tachat ayin,' 'tachat' literally means underneath. This hints that the punishment is 'beneath' the eye. The three letters for the Hebrew word ayin/eye are ayin, yud, nun. The letters that are directly 'beneath' each of these letters, that follow them in the alphabet, are pei, kaf, samech, which spells the Hebrew word kesef, "money".

SING TO WIN

The Kinloss Children's Choir (Years 3-6) and raffle is BACK!

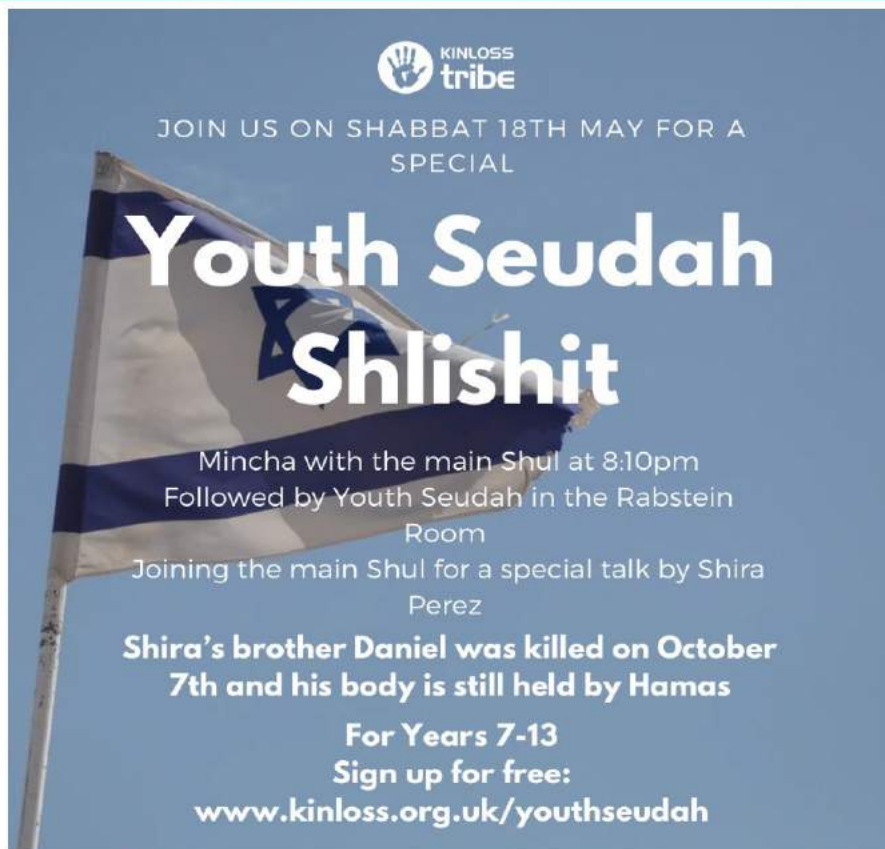

To mark the time period between Yom Haatzmaut and Yom Yerushalayim, the Years 3-6 Children's Services will be learning to sing the chorus of the Mi Shebeirach for the Israeli soldiers, with the aim of performing the song in the Main Shul and Minyan at the end of the services on Shabbat 1st June (the Shabbat before Yom Yerushalayim).

It would be lovely to have as many children as possible join the children's services on Shabbat 11th, 18th and 25th May, when they'll be learning the song, so they're ready to join the choir on 1st June.

Each week your child attends the service from May 11 - June 1, they'll be entered in to a raffle prize draw. So if they come for all four weeks, that's four raffle entries! A form will be sent out after each Shabbat on the KYC WhatsApp group which can be used to enter the raffle.

If they can't attend for all three weeks, they can practice at home too ...
