Tetzaveh

Tetzaveh describes the special uniforms of the Kohanim. Let us focus on two of the garments that the כהן גדול/High Priest, wore above all the other garments. The חשן/breast plate contained four rows of precious stones; the name of one of the 12 tribes was engraved on each stone. The אפד/apron covered the back of the כהן גדול from his waist down to his feet. The Torah describes how the חשן must always be securely attached to the אפד from both ends (Tetzaveh 28:27-28).

One of the 365 negative commandments is that the חשן must never move away or sway from the אפד. The Torah teaches us how to live, it is eternal. What is the timeless message contained in this commandment?

The חשן was worn over the top part of the body, over the כהן גדול's heart; the אפד was on the lower part of his body, from the waist to the bottom of his feet. The חשן was worn in the front and the אפד covered the back. The top and front represent the more sensitive, refined, spiritual parts of life. The back and lower part of the body represents the darker, more challenging times.

Most of us will experience times of hope, light and serenity but also times battling with challenges, guilt, fear or shame. When we are confronted with these difficult feelings we need to connect strongly to the present, represented by the front, rather than getting swept away by them. The חשן and the אפד need to stay connected.

Furthermore, this Mitzvah teaches us there is no 'חשן' without an 'אפד' and vice versa. Our path to finding our mission in life (represented by the חשן) is actually through our struggles (represented by the אפד). Challenges are not shameful and we never have to sever or run away from any part of ourselves. It is our struggles which help us discover who we are. Every part of our life contains meaning. Difficult times and mistakes are an opportunity for growth when we connect to the חשן, finding the Divine light and message hidden beneath the difficulties. It's the אפד, our flaws and challenges, which give us the sensitivity, awareness and humility which are a springboard for growth. We find our path through the struggles we work through.

Clearly there may be times where we simply need to acknowledge our struggles with compassion. The deeper level of work may come later on, which will be using the challenge as a catalyst for transformation, connecting the חשן and the אפד, thinking about how this is part of our spiritual purpose.

Every part of ourselves, even those parts we may not like, are an opportunity to connect with our highest and deepest self. Although none of us wish for challenges, life is not always plain sailing. May we all have the inner courage and strength to view and use our challenges as opportunities to maximise our potential.

Shabbat Shalom! Good Shabbos! Chazan Eli and Nechama Sufrin
