Leadership and the Golden Calf

by Rebbetzin Tali Harris

The story of the Golden Calf is one of the most iconic sins in the Torah. After having just have experienced mass revelation of God at Har Sinai, Bnei Yisrael become concerned as to Moshe's whereabouts due to miscounting the days since his departure. Despite having just received the Torah, the nation turns to Aharon in desperation and plea with him to construct them a gold calf to worship. While it may seem surprising and confusing to us, Aharon goes along with the people's requests. When Moshe returns to the camp and sees what is happening, he throws the luchot down in disappointment and despair.

Rabbi Yosef Soloveitchik, the great American Torah thinker, points out that Moshe and Aharon have vastly different response to the incident. Moshe appears to be far more denouncing and sterner while Aharon works with the people, "procrastinating, hoping against hope to defuse the frightened and confused masses" (Reflections of the Rav, Vol. 1). How can it be that the two great leaders of the time had such polar responses?

Rav Soloveitchik explains that there are two different forms of leadership which are being displayed, the king-teacher and the saint-teacher. The king-teacher is represented by Moshe. He uses justice, holds people accountable, and sees merit as an important means of instruction. The saint-teacher, by contrast, is guided by compassion and overflowing kindness. This paradigm is represented by Aharon. This is not to suggest that Moshe was not compassionate, and Aharon was not just, rather it displays a core characteristic of their leadership.

The Midrash Tanchuma elaborates on this, suggesting that the traits of truth and righteousness are epitomized by Moshe and the traits of kindness and peace are epitomized by Aharon. It is essential that we note that even though Moshe was of course the leader and the one in constant conversation with Hashem, there was a support system of leaders in place bellow him. Aharon and Moshe had a strong teamworking ethic which is clear to us from the many occasions on which they act as a unit before the people. Their differences complement each other perfectly and make for an ideal team. Despite this, on this occasion, given the fact that they are not together to balance each other, each of their core traits drove their deeply contrasting responses.

Email sent from The Executive, Rabbinic Team and Kinloss Staff to members on Friday 23rd February 2024

Dear Members,

We hope you are keeping well.

We are writing to address a matter of utmost importance regarding the behaviour on Shabbat. It has come to our attention that there have been instances of significant disruptive behaviour including physical damage by children, leading to discomfort and distress for both fellow community members and our dedicated caretaking staff.

Unfortunately, members of our caretaking staff have reported instances of abuse and mistreatment, which is unacceptable and goes against the principles of our community. We must work together to create a safe and welcoming environment for all, where everyone feels valued and respected.

As a community, it is crucial that we uphold the values of respect, kindness, and consideration for others. It is essential that we all take responsibility for ensuring that our children understand and adhere to appropriate behaviour guidelines while in the building. This is especially important with the current security situation.

Let us come together to ensure a positive environment for all members and staff.

Your support and cooperation in this matter are greatly appreciated.

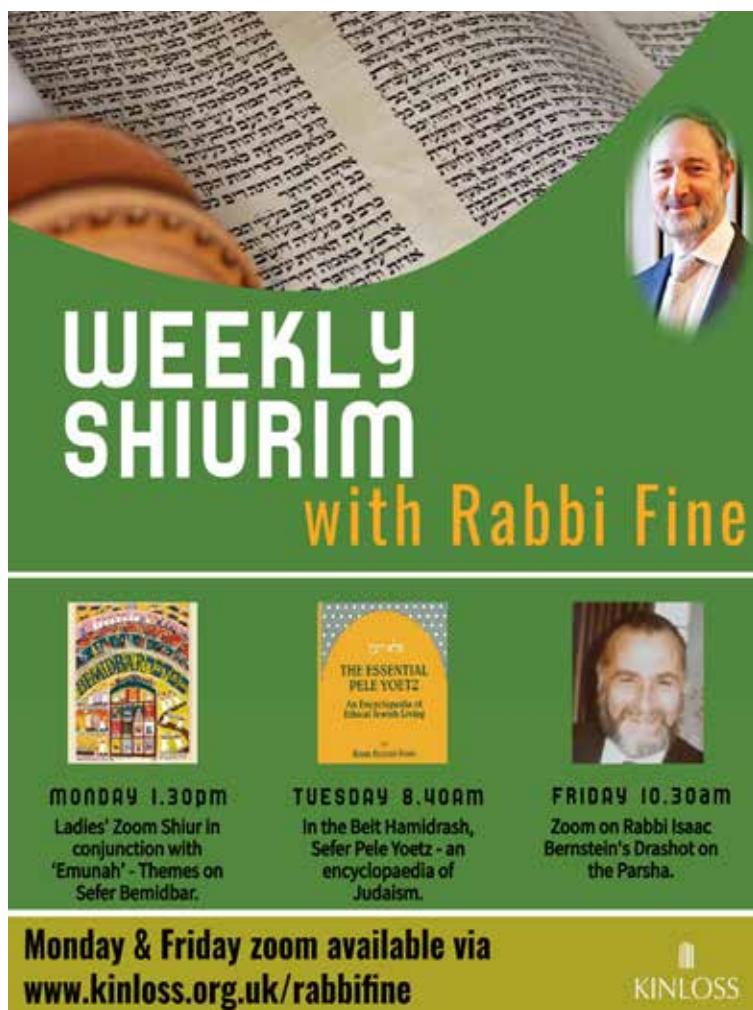

Shabbat Shalom and Best Wishes,

The Executive, Rabbinic Team and Kinloss Staff
