The arrival information sheet is a document that provides details about the arrival of passengers and cargo at an airport. It includes information such as the flight number, airline, aircraft type, and the time and location of arrival. This information is used by airport authorities to coordinate ground services, such as baggage handling, passenger processing, and cargo loading. The arrival information sheet is also used by airlines to track the status of their flights and to provide information to passengers about their arrival times and locations. The arrival information sheet is a critical part of the airport's operations and is essential for ensuring the smooth and efficient arrival of passengers and cargo.
