“I have great pleasure in introducing our first mixed show of 2018. The Easter exhibition captures the sense of joy the artists find here; the inspiration which abounds in the most simple of sights. With winter firmly behind us, the focus is on bright skies, green fields and sweeping white beaches full of promise for the summer ahead. If, like me, you’ve got a soft spot for TreSCO cattle, then they’re here too. Meander through the paths and rides and lose yourself in the familiar views that say ‘TreSCO’ to you.”

“ I visited Tresco in October last and stayed in North End which turned out to be a good location to explore all areas from. I am naturally drawn to the wooded areas to the east, where you can find rows of Scots pines with little peeps in between to the ocean and other islands. The island was quiet at this time of the year, but the solitude was wonderful.

I hope that these paintings do it justice.”

“ Sadly, I didn’t get to Scilly this year, so this collection is drawn from my many happy memories of visiting these beautiful Islands over the last 50 years. Although I still paint in watercolour, this year’s entire collection is in water-soluble wax pastel, and I have thoroughly enjoyed the freedom this medium has given me.

I hope you like this new body of work as much as I have loved creating it.”

“The patterns and rhythms found in wild, sparse landscapes have been a recurring theme in my art practice, and the granite-strewn maritime heath on the north end of Tresco is just such a place. This extreme environment is alternatively blitzed and nourished by Atlantic wind, rain and salt and blessed under open skies. Here heather moorland is modelled into windswept wave forms and the surface granite is eroded and sculpted.”

“This collection of paintings reflects my fascination with the complex nature of shore lines and the incoming sea. The shadows, stark grass banks, rough seas and the rich colours of the island sands are the perpetual challenge. Working from such rich stimulus is demanding and there always is more that can be said and needs to be achieved.”

“A week on Tresco in January, proved to be a great place to enjoy a new year. Some quiet solitude, but slow, ambling walks revealed that the landscape was alive with birds. The oystercatchers were out in force, bothering molluscs. Black-throated and great northern divers were offshore. Even a pair of short-eared owls roosting in the dunes on Pentle Bay. It's mid winter, but spring never seems far away.”

“ Each time I visit Tresco I see the island in a new light, as if through new eyes. For such a tiny dot on the map, few places could provide so many new angles, aspects, views and moods.

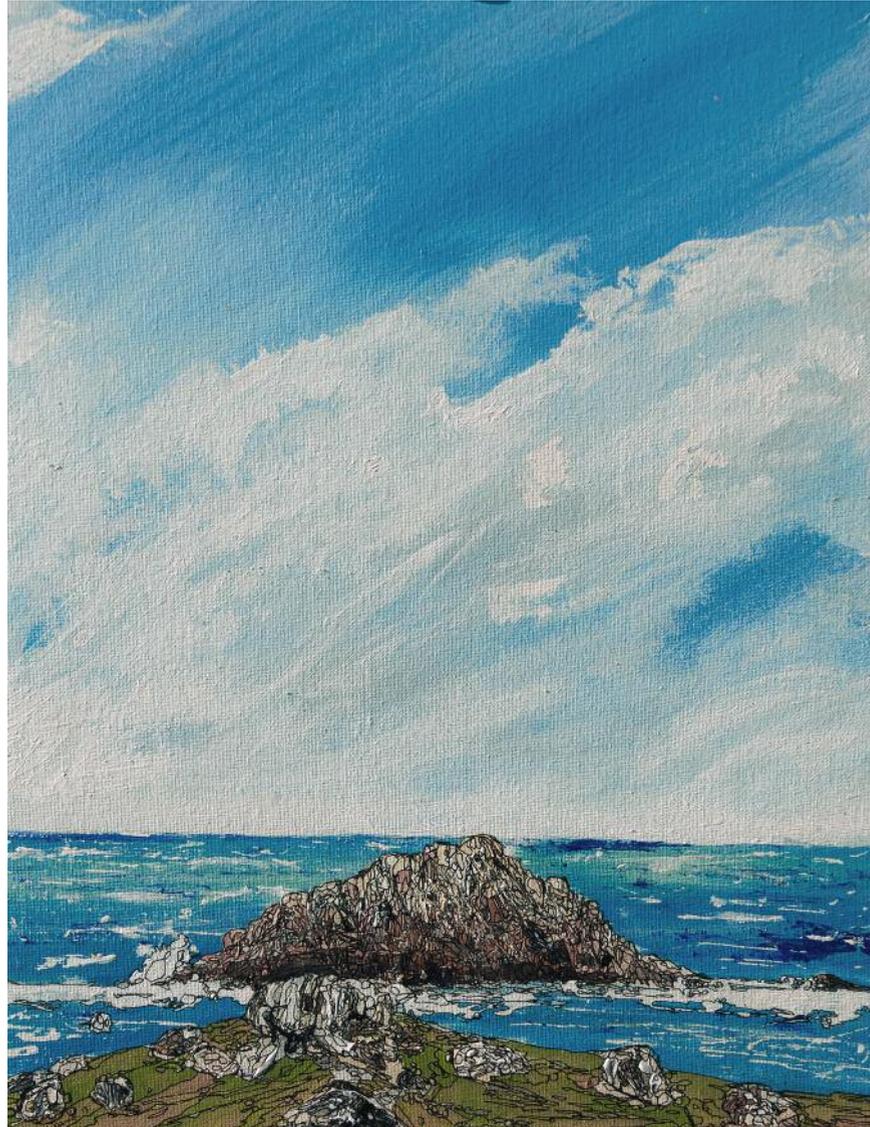

The visual relationship that this island has with its Scillies sisters is magical; the tides rise and fall, the skies forever change. Tresco, you never disappoint. Please keep up the challenge, enlightenment and delight.”

“It’s always great to see the swallows arrive, such a small bird that comes a long way. I’m lucky enough to have a few nests on my property and one right outside my workshop. Occasionally they find their way in and perch on my workbench where I can get a very close up view of them. Hope you like what I have produced for the exhibition.”
