Simplify and Scale: Publishers Share Journeys to OA Success

In 2026, publishers are facing the opportunity and threat of Artificial Intelligence, crushing submission volumes, and rising research integrity concerns as well as the impact of continuous budget uncertainty from their institutional customers.

As these pressures ripple throughout the industry, publishers of all sizes and disciplines are looking to simplify their current operational processes so they can focus on unlocking future value. In a maturing OA landscape, there is much opportunity for improved efficiency that can serve current OA programs as well as prepare for any new workflows and strategies that may emerge over time.

In this complimentary webcast, a diverse panel of scholarly publishers will explore OA-related challenges and successful strategies for scaling multiple business models, modernizing the author experience, and streamlining OA management for themselves and their institutional partners. After this session, attendees will walk away with actionable ideas and best practices for excellence in OA operations.
